To whom it may concern,

After attending the presentation on July 11, 2016 at University Place Conference center I was left feeling that not enough actual physical cleanup was proposed in the plan for the Portland Harbor Clean-up Project. Much of the work is left up to mother nature to correct with just a small portion of the site being dredged and the contaminated sediment removed. In addition, capping large portions of the shoreline doesn't offer a long-term solution either it only serves to leave the contaminants where they are. We owe it to the river to do a proper cleanup of the 100 years' worth of toxins that have been dumped in our river.

Thank you,
